Policy scenario

The National Informatisation Policy was adopted in June 2001. It formulates general principles for building and development of the information society. One major action has been taken, the adoption of the Strategy of Informatisation of Society in the conditions of the Slovak Republic and the Action Plan by the Slovak Government on January 21st, 2004. The Strategy is based on the Policy of Informatisation of Society and the eEurope+ Action Plan and existing strategic objectives in various sectors. The support for coordination of digitisation is not explicitly formulated in any political documents. In 2001 the National Council has adopted a Declaration on Protection of Cultural Heritage, which was followed by 2002 Government Resolution on measures to be taken in culture, where the long term strategy is to form and build a uniform information system for all parts of the cultural and natural heritage compatible with European and world systems.

In November 2004 the government approved the Strategy of State Cultural Policy and the Action Plan for Initial Phase Implementation of Cultural Policy. One of the goals of the policy is provide for preservation and access to cultural heritage, its systematic digitisation and implementation of ICT to cultural infrastructure. The strategy explicates among others these priorities of the action plan that include digitisation: restoration of audio-visual cultural heritage and launch of the “Register of Culture” project. The Ministry of Culture prepares strategy of systematic digitisation of audiovisual materials according to which state institutions (Slovak Television, Slovak Film Institute and its part National Film Archives) will preserve audiovisual material held by these institutions and also private entities. In cultural sector it is the respective central national institution that manages digitisation projects. Under Ministry of Culture these projects form a part of the State Information System (developed since 1995) and are reviewed by the Board on Implementation of ICT in the Cultural Sector. Digitisation is funded from annual budget allocated from Ministry of Culture as a part of regular contribution to state institutions or also to other entities (state, local, private) under the grant schemes offered by the Ministry of Culture in these areas:

- Let’s restore our house - preservation of monuments
- Ex Libris – literature, book culture and libraries
- Support for audiovisual creativity
- Cultural activities in the area of art
- Cultural activities of minorities

Co-operation

On national level there exists cooperation among state and local institutions within projects coordinated by the National Library (KIS3G), the National Museum (CEMUZ) and the National Gallery (CEDVU). Slovakia is involved in the UNESCO Memory of the World Programme by its Memory of Slovakia Programme which has these digitisation projects:

- Basagic Islamic Manuscripts (University Library in Bratislava)
- Illuminated Codices of the Bratislava Chapter House (Slovak National Library, Slovak National Archives)

The University Library in Bratislava takes part in the UNESCO projects Value Added services for the Memory of the World and Multinational digital library and archiving system in technical sciences. Slovak cultural entities have an opportunity of cooperation within the Visegrad group, Culture 2000, MEDIA Plus and EURIMAGES initiatives. After accession to EU, Slovak cultural institutions are largely invited to get involved in R&D Framework Programs. An example is the TELME-MORE (The European Library) project with participation of the Slovak National Library.

As for NRG and MINERVA results and their usage, the Good Practice Handbook, Charter of Parma, NRG Terms of Reference and other documents related to digitisation of cultural and scientific heritage (UNESCO) have been translated to Slovak and made widely available at www.viks.sk/digitus. A package of 2003 Status Report, Charter of Parma and Good Practice Handbook is distributed together with Slovak printed version of the Handbook under the title Digitisation of Cultural and Scientific Heritage: Recommendations for Slovak Organisations to about 250 cultural institutions.

Main digitisation initiatives

There are two main cross-sectoral projects that include digitisation of cultural and scientific heritage:

- Programme of Implementation of ICT in Libraries (Slovak National Library), 2002. Within this program, there are two mutually related projects in progress at present: KIS3G - Common Library and Information System; and VIKS - Virtual Library of Slovakia (a digital library)

The following projects are managed by the respective central cultural institution:

- CEMUZ: central register of museum objects (managed by the Slovak National Museum), approved in 2003
- AIS OP: automated information system of preservation of monuments (Institute of Monuments) 2003,
- Geographic information system of monuments (Institute of Monuments), 2004
- CEDVU: central register of works of fine arts (Slovak National Gallery), 2002
- THEISA: theatrical information system for archives (Theatre Institute), 2002
- LINDA: literary information database (Literary Information Centre); 2002
- SNORKA: music database (Music Centre); 2002
- SKCINEMA: film database (Slovak Film Institute); 2002
- IS DIZAJN: information system for Design (Slovak Centre of Design); 2004

A national cultural portal, Register of Culture, is a project of a national cultural portal managed by the Ministry of Culture, ICT Department. The objective is a comprehensive interface to multiple information databases built in the cultural sector in two logical parts – the register of cultural heritage and the register of cultural activities. In 2005 this initiative will be elaborated into an executive project by the Ministry of Culture and the University Library in Bratislava that will also be the operator of the Register of Culture that will be available at www.registerculture.sk and will be a part of a future European cultural portal. Of many cultural websites maintained by national and regional cultural organisations for users in Slovakia the following can be mentioned:
